

One day Faculty Development programme on Creative Teaching and Research in Legal Education

The reform of legal education is a continuous process and it has to take place both outside and inside the system. The reforms are very often directed at the outside i.e the market and the state, the regulatory agencies and the like without much emphasis on internal reforms involving teaching and research. Teachers and researchers do not ask the same questions that they raise when considering the transparency and accountability in the state and the market.

Legal education and research must be seen as a social formation which underscores learning, teaching, thinking and writing. Learning law is fascinating because one learns the old alongside precarious new. Therefore it is said that there is no hierarchy between the teacher and the student but only acts of learning together about the past and the future of law in society. Teaching law is a continual aspect of learning all teaching is constant learning and unlearning.

It is a constitutional duty to strive towards a spirit of enquiry in all walks of life and therefore law teaching has to be directed towards attaining excellence. It is free and critical thinking and imagination lead to excellence. For a long time, only good teaching was relatively significant than legal research and writing. Things have changed with modernization of legal education, the interaction of case method, varieties of clinical legal education and through the process of ongoing globalization. The relevance of legal education and research lies in stabilizing and maintaining high degree of consensus on basic constitutional values such as justice, human rights, democracy and the like.

Accordingly, this FDP is organised to sensitize law teachers in effective learning, teaching, thinking and writing by employing innovative methods so as to internalize basic constitutional values.

Keeping this vision law teaching in the period of Globalization requires acquisition of vast knowledge. In view of this, senior most professors of law who are both well informed Academicians and Eminent Administrators of different universities are drawn for this workshop to inculcate some of the teaching skills and adopt them in teaching methods which will be of immense help to the students and Academic Community.
